

School and Your Future

There are two types of students in school: one that tries to succeed, and one that isn't as determined to achieve success. It all depends on how much effort you're willing to put into school. The lack of effort students put into school is the reason for high school drop outs. There are several students that dislike school, and wish that they can finish it as quickly as possible. Has anyone ever thought about the amount of time you should stay in school compared to how long it is that you have to work at your job?

Think about it. The amount of time you spend in school is thirteen years or more. Compare that to how long you have to work at a job. You have to work to support yourself, which is a lot more than thirteen years. The retirement age is between 55 and 70. If you quit high school, you'll be working for about forty years or more. Going to school for a couple of years is a small amount of time compared to how long you have to work. Students should reconsider the thought of staying in school and going to college.

School helps you become what you want to be. You can pick any career that you desire, but you should be picking ones that you think would be the easiest to achieve. School may be tough, but it's a major step to success. No one should drop out of high school because they think it's too hard. There is a reason why we have teachers. They're there to help us when we're confused and need help. No one should even think of giving up when they haven't given their all.

Not having enough money to go to college is an excuse. There are several scholarships, grants, and loans that you can apply for. There are plenty of students that don't have enough money for college or no money at all. Instead of deciding not to go to college, several students earn scholarships. There are some scholarships that aren't as easy to get as others. You don't have to go for the hard scholarships. You can gather the small, easier scholarships, and make your way up. Soon enough, you will have enough money to pay for college, and maybe even earn a full ride.

Before you decide to be a high school dropout, think about how it will impact your future. School is a once in a life time thing, and sometimes, it's hard to earn a second chance. If you want to become successful, you have to earn it. Success doesn't come to you, you go to it. School will always impact your future, so the question is, are you willing to fight for your future?
